Symposium: Extreme Right Discourses

In recent years, the extreme right has had more visibility and has held important political positions in Europe and in other parts of the world such as the United States and Brazil. The purpose of this symposium is to analyze, explain, and understand the discourses of the extreme right and their rise to power from a diverse perspective (journalistic, sociological, political, historical, discursive, etc.) with the idea of looking for tools to counter extremism that violate human rights, justice, and democracy.

Call for papers:

If you are interested in presenting your research in this symposium you can send an abstract of 250 to 400 words through the registration link provided below. We will be selecting a limited number of abstract with preference for doctoral theses in progress.

All prospective presenters must submit abstracts by October 14th.
